Lotoja

For something that sounds like a boiled Asian vegetable, Lotoja at age ten has certainly seasoned nicely.

It's long since gone from being an incentive for a few riders to being an inundation of hundreds, but in its tenth year the Logan to Jackson Road Race remains one of the unique cycling experiences in America.

It all starts right here in Logan Saturday when category I, II and III cyclists shove off from Sunrise Cyclery at 6:45 a.m., go insane over Tincup Pass, and wind up in Wyoming at some wretched hour, wimps no more.

The country's longest single day cycling competition, 203 miles to Teton Village, will attract 200 riders, only a few of them out primarily for reasons of health, as were the innocent originals.

The licensed riders will race for prizes totaling $5,000 in cash and merchandise in addition to a $500 cash reward for the cyclist who breaks the current course record of eight hours, 10 minutes.

A year ago Benton Hart of Modesto, Calif. hammered through wind and chill, hail and rain to win in 9:16:09. There is no sign of him so far this year, however.

Salt Lake City will weigh in with teams from Bingham's Cyclery (led by Steve Tibbits) and Mi Duole, led by Eric Schramm. Is there hope for the rural individual against these massed urban forces? If his name is Nelson Cronyn, there is. Or Mike Daley.

National masters champ Cronyn and Daley are mentioned by race director Ron Stagg as riders to watch. He also advises an eye out for Mindy Gurr, last year's female winner, who should repeat.

Local favorites in the citizens (unlicensed) race include Ken Murphy, Larry Jacobsen, Craig Sorenson, Art Heers and Tom Dyson.
